ANNOUNCEMENTS

FOR SHERIFF

DUVALL—We are authorized to announce Alonzo J. Duvall a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Crittenden county, subject to the action of the Republican party. Election 1905.

If it be true as is claimed by the Parker managers, that the Democratic party has returned to "Sanity," what assurance have we that it will continue sane?—Sun Sentinel.

The Western Laborer that has heretofore supported Bryan comes out for Roosevelt:

"We cannot remain in a party which we have seen pledged to turn the Government over to a man who dare not state where he stands on a public policy until after David Hill and other managers for Wall street, the banks, trusts and corporations had duped the party and stolen the nomination for him. We cannot and will not follow the standard of such a leader, not even for Bryan's sake."

THE NOMINATION.

"As in the days when the free-lance chiefs of Scotland's famous chivalry assembled their clans with the sign of the fiery cross to repel some common foe who threatened their independence, so the Democratic hosts met in consultation last week in St. Louis to plan the campaign that is to deal a death blow to Republican encroachment and usurpation of the sacred rights and liberties of a freeborn American people."

The above is just the beginning of an editorial that appeared in the Danville News last week. As it proceeds it gets worse. We tried to read it but failed. There is something wrong with the editor. No sane man would take on that way. I think he wanted to say that Judge Alton B. Parker had been nominated by the Democratic party for President, but I am not certain about it.—Sun Sentinel.

A FAIR EXAMPLE.

From the view point of fair-mindedness we can hold on to our political beliefs still, and then condemn the standard bearers of the great parties. In the heat of political up-heaval we forget often that men and not demagogues, are the ranks of both parties. Judge Parker at Esopus, save with his political advisers, is maintaining a dignified silence. For this he is being both assailed and commended by the press of the country. But here is time enough to speak, time enough to tune his lyre to the principles of his party. True, Esopus is now the Mecca of Democracy's adherents, but Oyster Bay is no less conspicuous in the Republican mind. Parker, the silent, is an antithesis to Roosevelt, the strenuous. The very nature of the two men admit of the widest difference. Parker is silent from nature and Roosevelt is impetuous from nature, but the dignified silence of both gentlemen is a portentous rebuke to brawling battle wagers who infect the ranks of both parties. Not that there does not have to be drawn lines and much confusion, but wait till the martialled hosts get on the field of conflict. But few great battles have been fought without their having been first fought out in the quiet of preparation and planning by the leaders. Omnipotent signs now point to this fact. No bluster at Oyster Bay, none at Esopus. Quiet is the Indiana Senator and equally quiet is the West Virginia Senator, nor is there the least doubt that both candidates desire the office to which they aspire. Fame, deluding fame, whispers delightfully to them and paints visions of other days when history shall hold companionship with them as it does with Washington, with Jackson, with Lincoln. Is not this worth striving for? But the uncertainty of who is to get the prize adds zest and excitement to the contest. But there is such a thing as firing the gun before we see the target, then the advantage is with the other fellow. Mr. Cleveland's advice is good for both sides, "Steady, Democrats, steady," but more applicable to his party from a Cleveland view point.

With all the acrimony, hatred and heaped-up jealousy that a political contest engenders, Parker and Davis, Roosevelt and Fairbanks are clean, courageous gentlemen. Neither one is a demagogue nor would either uphold or foster demagogery for a moment. We have our choice of the two because he represents the principles for which we stand. Each side can claim the same. But whichever is the choice in November, we know a man of untainted principle will be President, for the patriotic American people will have no other kind.

WHEN HILL WEPT.

After Weeks of Anxiety His Cherished Plans Were Successful.

According to the dispatches from Chicago, David B. Hill wept when the nomination of Judge Parker was announced. After the strain of months of hard work and weeks of anxiety, the ambition of his political career had been realized and his closest friend was named for the presidency. Senator Hill is not the first man who has displayed such extreme emotion in a national political convention. No less a person than a former President of the United States broke down and gave vent to his feelings. That person was John Tyler, who, as a delegate from Virginia, attended the Harrisburg convention where Henry Clay was the leading candidate for the nomination. Clay was the idol of Tyler's heart, and he worked night and day to help nominate the mill boy of the slashes. When the crucial moment came and Clay was defeated Tyler was totally unable to control himself, and going to one of the rear seats, sat down and wept like a child.

ALONZO J. DUVALL

Announces Candidacy for Sheriff of Crittenden County.

Elsewhere in this issue we present to our readers the announcement of Alonzo J. Duvall, of this city, who is a candidate for Sheriff of Crittenden county subject to the action of the Republican party.

Mr. Duvall was born within 2 miles of Dycusburg 54 years ago and at the age of one year his parents moved to a place 6 miles north east of Marion and near Weston, this county.

Long before the railroad was built through Marion he hauled goods from Weston to Marion and in 1881 he moved to Marion and has lived here and engaged in the transfer business ever since.

He is the head of the Duvall Transfer Co., of this place and is a man of sterling worth, strict integrity and very conservative. A financial success in his own business we take it the sheriff's office would be in competent hands if he should be elected at the polls.

He has been a Republican all his life and has never held an office. The Record speaks for him careful consideration by the committee or by the people at the primary, whichever method is chosen to select the candidates. If the people select him as their standard bearer, the Record will be for him all down the line.

Evangelist. Miss Bertie Crow.

Evangelists J. J. Smith, of Clinton, Ky., and Miss Bertie Crow, of Missouri, stopped over here Monday en route to the annual camp meeting at Hampton which begins Thursday. They decided to remain over here until Thursday and they began services at the Christian church, but that proving inadequate for the large congregations, services were held at the opera house. Tuesday and Wednesday nights where Miss Crow preached to large and attentive audiences. Tuesday night she spoke on the theme, "What shall I do with Jesus?" She was tired and worn out when she arrived in the city, as a result of work elsewhere but her delivery was splendid and she was understood by every one in the large audience. Her sermon on Tuesday evening was especially powerful and appealing.

With the Churches.

Rev. T. A. Conway preached at the Baptist church Sunday morning his theme being the "Law of Christ."

Rev. T. V. Joiner, of the Methodist church, preached, union services being held in the evening. His theme was the "Mind of Christ."

Rev. T. V. Joiner preached at the Methodist church Sunday morning. His text was 1st King, 17:15 and 16.

Rev. S. J. Martin preached at the Presbyterian church Sunday. His text, Deut. 1:6-7.

THE SALEM DISTRICT

Mining and Milling on a Most Extensive Scale in Our Sister City.

D. Garth Heavner, of Eagle Fluor Spar Ore, is in Poria, Ill., this week.

The big mill at the Evening Star mine, is almost completed. This is the highest building in the State outside of Louisville. When completed it will be the most complete and largest plant in the United States, devoted exclusively to mining. It is nine stories in height and 90x120 ft. Equipped with the latest machinery and has two 200 horse power boilers.

The Nancy Hanks mine, owned by the Albany Mining and Investment, is mining as fine lead ore as ever came out of old mother earth. This mine is equipped with all the latest mining machinery and has a capacity of 1000 feet.

C. R. Steves, general manager of the Western Clay and Mining Co., is now ready to make contracts for the transportation of his clay to the railroad. He wants 50 or 100 teams at once. This mine produced and shipped more mineral last year than any mine in the world, more than 8000 tons having been mined and shipped and this year it is the intention of this Company to mine and ship 16000 tons or double the amount that was mined last year.

The big mill at the Riley mine will be in operation next Friday. This mill is one of the very latest plants to be erected in the Salem district and is at one of the best lead properties in the United States.

The Klondike mine of the Pittsburg Mining and Manufacturing company is running on full time, and is producing lead and spar of the very finest quality.

A very fine vein of fluor spar has been uncovered on the Babb place by the West Kentucky Mining Co.

Messrs. Noe and Mosely of the Big 4 Mining Co., spent a day or two in the city last week. These gentlemen were surprised at the great development which has been made in the Salem district in the past month.

A Fine Cow Killed.

Last Saturday evening Mrs. J. E. Lloyd, of this city, left home to be gone some days. She left her milk cow in charge of J. B. Hughes. The cow not coming up at the usual time, Mr. Hughes went in search of her. Going over the pasture and not finding the cow he started home up the railroad. Having gone but a short distance he found the cow dead, having, it is supposed, been struck by the 7 o'clock south bound train. The cow is valued at about $40.

HOW IT FEELS.

The Two Presidential Candidates Received Convention's Decision.

How does it feel to be nominated as a candidate for the office of chief magistrate of the greatest republic in the world? What is the sensation that overtakes a man when he realizes that he is to be presented to his fellow-citizens as an available candidate for the position which is the birthright of every American boy? It will probably be difficult to ascertain the innermost feelings of the man at this psychological moment; but it is possible to note the things that he says and does on such an occasion. It has been said that the American people are emotional, but this allegation is not proven by the manner in which the great men of the country act at the most critical period of their public lives. When the news of his unanimous nomination reached President Roosevelt, he was sitting on the south veranda of the White House with the members of his family, and no one in the group seemed more unconcerned than the person who was most vitally interested. The President arose from his chair to receive the affectionate congratulations of those about him, and then went to the executive offices in the White House, where he immediately began the transaction of routine, executive business with his secretary. After that he received a number of visitors for whom engagements had been previously made, and then received and acknowledged a score of telegrams, of congratulations, the whole business being transacted in the most systematic and unhydraulic manner possible.

So it was with Justice Parker when the news of his nomination was received. As readers of the newspapers will readily recall, the judge was taking his regular early morning swim in the Hudson river when a representative of the press informed him that he had been nominated. He calmly thanked the visitor for his information, and clambering out of the water, donned his everyday clothes in the most matter-of-fact manner. After that he spent an hour in reading the newspapers and opening his morning mail. Then he started on his regular morning horseback ride. It must be a matter of congratulation to the American people to feel that two such self-contained men have been nominated for the highest office in the gift of the people. It is an object lesson which goes to prove that while we are a sentimental people, we can not be classed as a hysterical people.
